

AMERICAN INDIANS IN CHILDREN'S LITERATURE

American Indians in Children's and Young Adult Literature Presented by Debbie Reese

Wednesday, April 23rd

Northwest Museum of Arts & Culture
2316 West First Avenue
Spokane, Washington

Indians! In most people, the word summons images of "wild" Indians living off the land or threatening courageous pioneers. Such depictions are inaccurate and biased, and unfortunately, persistent in the American imagination. Join us as we create awareness of their pervasiveness, and learn about Native authors who write books that accurately portray Native peoples.

Debbie Reese is tribally enrolled at Nambe Pueblo where she grew up. She taught elementary school in public and U.S. Government schools for Native children prior to studying for her doctorate in Education at the University of Illinois. She taught for several years at the University of Illinois, in its American Indian Studies program. Her publications include articles and books used in Education, Library Science, and English courses at universities in the United States and Canada.
